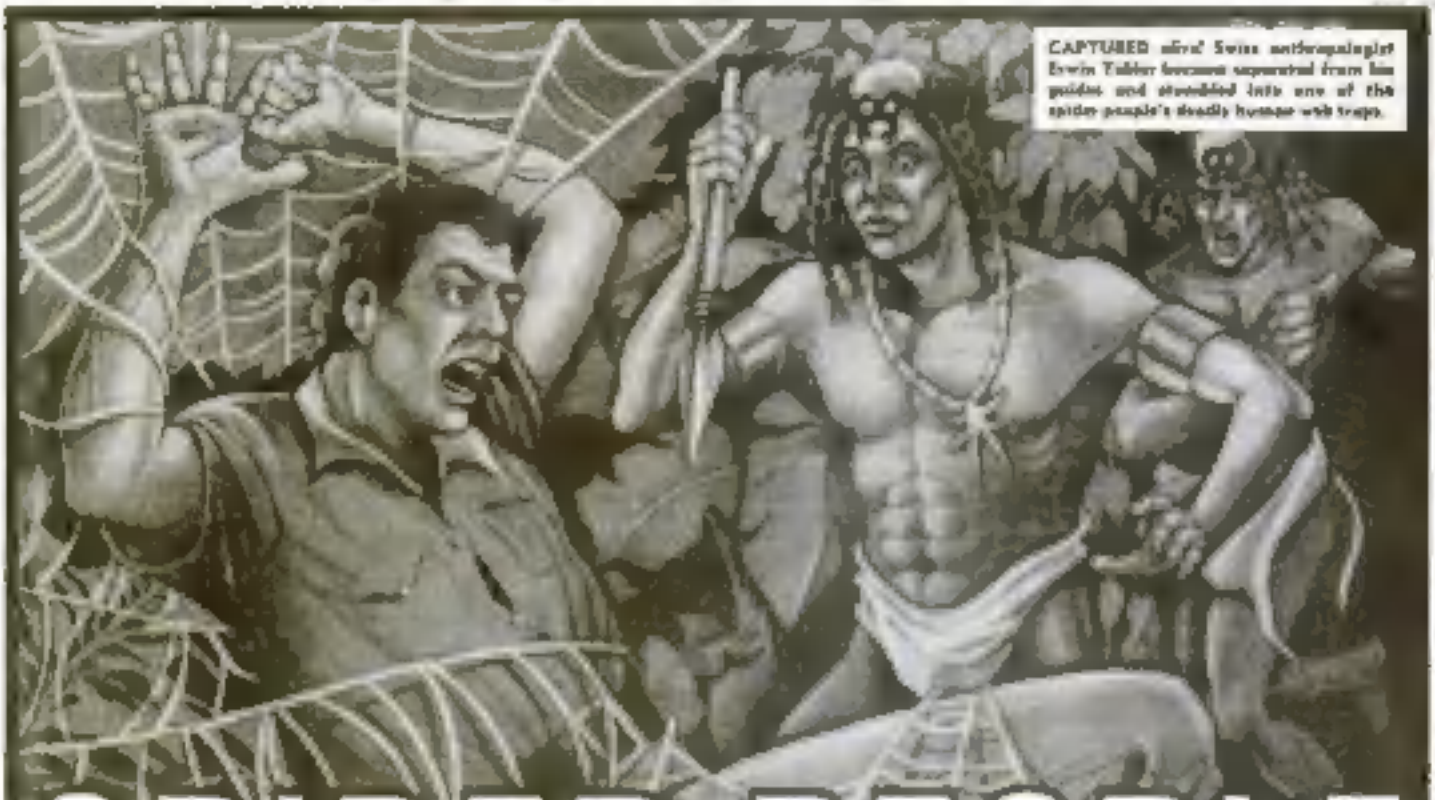
MARRIAGE CAN MAKE MEN SICK, SAYS STUDY



CAPTURED alive! Swiss anthropologist Erwin Tobler becomes separated from his guides and stumbles into one of the spider people's deadly human web traps.

SPIDER PEOPLE

of the Amazon almost had me for dinner!

By SUSAN PALMER

Deep in the steaming jungles of the Amazon Basin a tribe of ferocious killer savages thrive on human flesh and blood — by trapping their doomed prey in huge spider webs made from vines covered with sticky goo, reveals a famed anthropologist who survived a bone-chilling run-in with the spider people.

"These savage, blood-thirsty fiends were first discovered in 1637 by a Portuguese explorer, Pedro Teixeira," said modern-day adventurer Erwin Tobler.

"Over the past centuries, though, skeptics have snickered at his account — classifying it as sheer fantasy. However, my encounter with the spider people of the Amazon confirms the ancient legend — and was one of the most terrifying experiences imaginable," Tobler recalled with a shudder.

"I was brutally snared by one of their deadly webs — and watched in wide-eyed horror as they gleefully prepared to celebrate my arrival by draining my blood and pickling my body," he told stunned newsmen in Caicmani, Brazil.

The Swiss scientist said extensive research had convinced him Teixeira had been 100 percent accurate in his descriptions of the spider people. "And I determined I would be the first civilized man to see them — and survive — in 350 years," he continued.

"My long journey took me deep into the interior of northwestern Brazil and up the treacherous Rio Negro, which empties into the Amazon just below the Equator.

"During a torrential rainstorm downpour I became separated from my guides and walked right smack into one of their deadly spider webs.

"The more I struggled, the more entangled I became," Dr. Tobler said.

"Several hours passed — and a group of brutal-looking Indians appeared — the spider people. Many wore gold spider necklaces — and their hair was braided into eight hideous strands to symbolize a spider's legs."

Dr. Tobler said he was released from the web, trussed up and carried to a nearby village, where he was tossed into a thatched hut already occupied by two other unfortunate prisoners from a neighboring tribe.

"I watched in shocked horror as the high priest of the spider people and several burly warriors entered the hut, strung up one of the other prisoners by his heels, slit his throat and let the blood drain into gourds," he said his lifeless body into several large hunks, which they preserved with salt.

"When they had completed the grisly task, they left — but the priest turned to the doorway and pointed toward me. I was to be the next victim."

That night, through the other Indian prisoner freed himself and untied the anthropologist. They both fled in the darkness.

"Days later, I reached civilization," the haggard man said. "But as soon as I can, I'm returning to the land of these spider people. Whatever the cost, I must study them and their disgusting way of life."

Gal gets bizarre sentence for killing hubby

Yvonne Eileen Wood was sentenced to 40 years in prison in Washington State — one year for each year of life she stole from her husband by murdering him!

Pierce County Superior Court Judge J. Kelley Arnold said statistics show that 27-year-old Yvonne will have to live at least 60 years longer, to the age of 72, if his wife-killer's shot lives to death.

"I think she owes him for each one of those years," the judge explained.

The 27-year-old mother will be eligible for parole in 20 years.

Vampire bat nightmare kills teenager!

He dreamed he was being chased night after night — then died of a heart attack

By BOB LaBLEU

In a moment of shrieking horror, terrified teenager Dino Goldoni felt the fangs of a dozen blood-sucking bats slashing at his throat — and died of fright, unaware it was all just a horrible nightmare!

"For 39 straight nights, poor Dino dreamed he was being chased by vampire bats," said Dr. Giuseppe Silone, his psychiatrist.

"And on the 40th night they obviously caught up with him. His heart couldn't take it. The kid was literally scared to death."

The tragic tale began the day Dino and his classmates visited an exhibit of bats at a science museum in Naples, Italy.

"When he came home from school that afternoon he was trembling," recalled his mother Gina.

"He told us how the vampire bats sneak up on people and suck their blood. We told him not to worry but he just kept talking about them."

The flying demons were still on Dino's mind when he went to sleep that evening, and before long his chilling screams pierced the night air.

"We ran into his bedroom and he was sitting up in bed, shaking like he'd seen a ghost," said his father Salvatore.

"When we finally calmed him down, he told us he'd dreamed a dozen bats chased him through the woods, trying to get his blood. He tripped over a log and the bats were closing in — and then he woke up screaming."

Every night he had the same bloodcurdling dream.

"When his parents brought him to me, he was a total wreck," said Dr. Silone. "He couldn't eat, he couldn't sleep and he hadn't been to school in days.

"I wanted to hospitalize him but his parents wanted him at home."

Then one night the tormented teen let out a mind-numbing shriek, and nine more his parents rushed in.

"But this time was so very different," said his dad. "He was clawing at his throat, screaming, 'God, no! God, no! They got me!'

"His whole body shuddered and then he went limp."

An autopsy showed the 14-year-old died of a heart attack.

"There are no vampire bats for thousands of miles around here," said Dr. Silone. "But that doesn't matter — they killed him anyway."

Even a tasty chocolate chip cookie can't stop the paws of Christine Kahn, 3, who got her hand caught in a bubble gum machine in a Bristol, Conn., supermarket. Police Patrolman Tom Thayer used baby oil and petroleum jelly to loosen the tot's hand. After 20 minutes, the kindhearted cop finally managed to free her, just as the fire department arrived.

Rowdy judge arrested for fighting cops

Judge Alfred Washington found himself on the wrong side of the bench when he was fined $400 for disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

The 47-year-old judge from Jacksonville, Fla., got into hot water at a cocktail party for judges at a local hotel.

"The incident was precipitated wholly by myself," the judge said.

Police who were called to the hotel said they found Judge Washington lying in the parking lot.

The judge cursed and kicked when they handcuffed him and put him in the squad car, the cops said.

Judge Washington pleaded no contest to the charges.

Stunned docs freeze in shock when . . .

DEAD MAN WAKES UP DURING AUTOPSY!

By JOSE FERNANDEZ

An accident victim came within seconds of being butchered alive when he suddenly awoke in a morgue — just as a coroner's scalpel was slicing open his body!

Incredibly, Louis Rohas, the 28-year-old father of three had been pronounced dead 36 hours earlier from injuries he received when his car careened off a highway and plunged into a ravine near Cordoba, Spain.

Rohas, his "dead" body bathed but his injuries untreated, lay covered with a sheet in a hospital morgue until pathologist Jose Delgado and his assistant, Dr. Alfonso Cano, began his autopsy.

'Corpse' lets out a scream as scalpel slices him

"We were just sitting into his chest when he coughed," Dr. Delgado told The NEWS. "Then he screamed.

"I just stood there with my scalpel in my hand, frozen in total disbelief.

"My scalpel had laid him open from his chest to his navel and blood was gushing everywhere. Hearts do not pump blood after death. This was not a cadaver I was working on — it was a living person!

"I can only thank God that the autopsy was being done in the hospital. Usually, I do it in the city morgue. But in the hospital I had a chance — just a slight chance — to repair the terrible wound my scalpel had made," Dr. Delgado said.

"Within seconds, Dr. Cano had the man connected to life support machinery and whole blood was being pumped back into his body. A surgeon rushed to the morgue and between us we managed to repair the wound.

"Because the purpose of an autopsy is to examine tissues and vital organs, they had suffered no serious damage. But had the man not made his sign of life, I would have crashed through his chest and tied him with open.

"There, he most certainly would be dead."

Rohas had suffered crushing injuries when his car rolled down the 150-foot embankment and skidded into the boulder-strewn ravine.

It took rescuers almost four hours to reach the wreck and pull the twisted wreckage from the water.

Rohas' wife, Silvia, was killed in the crash. She was seven months pregnant and the couple had spent the day shopping for a new crib. The unborn infant died. The couple's other three children were with their grandmother.

"When Rohas was brought into us he had several severe injuries, any one of which was serious enough to be fatal," Chief Surgeon Miguel Salas said. "At any rate, absolutely none of the life signs were apparent. He had been declared dead on arrival.

"The only thing we can determine at this stage is that he suffered injury to the brain that plunged him into a deep, deep coma. We do know that he wasn't breathing, but his heart and metabolism probably had slowed to the point where it could not be detected. When Dr. Delgado began cutting, the shock must have triggered his brain back into action."

Mad scientist tries to create a half-ape, half-human monster!

A disgraced and outlawed Austrian surgeon is altering the genes of apes and monkeys in a fiendish experiment to recreate a monster from the Stone Age — a Neanderthal man!

By JOHN LYONS

Dr. Anton Jankach, who lost his license to practice because of his ghoulish work with stolen corpses, is performing his madman experiments in a mountain villa somewhere near San Marino del Calvi in northern Italy.

Members of the worldwide police agency, Interpol, have been searching for the evil doctor's mountain laboratory for almost a year, but so far their efforts to find him have been fruitless.

Jankach, who is reportedly insane, but so cunning as a fox," Interpol Agent Hans Goertz told The NEWS.

Incredibly, Dr. Jankach's murderous work is actually a corrupted extension of the genetic research now going on in leading laboratories throughout Europe.

According to Dr. Lars Hamberger of the renowned Karolinska research hospital in Stockholm, Sweden, human fertilize hamster, rat and mice eggs in test-tube experiments.

He said the resultant hamster embryos — known as "hamsters" — are not allowed to develop past initial cell cleavage stages.

But he is deeply worried nevertheless.

"I am personally a little scared of the experiments," Dr. Hamberger said. "And I am very surprised that there has not been a wider public reaction for greater discussion of the research."

The tests are being carried out to learn how and why sperm from sterile men fail to function properly.

Hamberger said, "no one has yet carried out the experiments on the higher species of ape.

"But one can have one's thoughts that some researcher may try it."

But, according to Agent Goertz, such experiments are being carried out in Dr. Jankach's secluded laboratory — with monkeys and apes.

"Can you possibly imagine the awful consequences of such insane work?" Goertz asked.

"It is the greatest, darkest fear of all sensible scientists — that some madman may toy with the work of God — the telling what monsters this fiend may turn loose. We know he is determined to skew — to recreate — man's link to the Neanderthal specimen of the Stone Age.

"Dr. Jankach must be found — and he must be stopped at all costs. This world will not be safe for decent human beings until he is put away for the Space alien newspaper stuns world's scientists

This proves extraterrestrials have visited Earth, says expert

A Bolivian scientist has translated an extraterrestrial newspaper with stories and headlines as violent and depressing as those that Earth dailies print every day!

Dr. Jorge Romero Canelas, one of South America's foremost linguists, had to get the strange paper from a farmer who found it on his couch near La Paz after a close encounter with a UFO.

The world's scientific community is stunned by the discovery and members of various organizations are making immediate plans to fly to Bolivia to inspect the newspaper firsthand.

"This proves beyond doubt that extraterrestrials are visiting Earth and have much the same interest in news events that we do," Dr. Canelas told newsmen. "The newspaper is sent in circular and printed on a thin white metal that has been tested by experts who say it is unlike anything on Earth and obviously came from another planet.

"I simply cannot overestimate the significance of this newspaper," the scientist continued. "The stories concern events that have happened on 32 different planets. This is a clear indication that extraterrestrial life is thriving all over the universe."

Dr. Canelas said the newspaper's stories were written in a mathematical code that was so easy to translate, "It is almost surely a universal language."

Oddly enough, the circular newspaper's stories are all printed within grooves like those on a record album. The reader must start in the middle and read counterclockwise to the outer rim, Dr. Canelas said.

Among the headlines and stories were:

● Drought in Orsinia. The story hints that food production on the planet has ground to a halt after a lengthy, devastating drought. On a high note, emergency relief from a neighboring planet was expected to save the planet's population from starvation.

● Orsog murders Kupenia. These two creatures from feuding planets allegedly met to discuss differences but quickly engaged in battle. According to the report, Orsog fatally stabbed Kupenia with something called a "darta horn."

● Peggy Poisoning — Two Die. Two aliens from the planet Zenda reportedly ate a small animal known as a "peggy" before it was properly cooked. They perished from "peggy poisoning," an affliction that is apparently well-known in the universe.

● Chariot Crash Inferno. A pair of UFOs exploded in flames after a collision near the planet Elgan. Incredibly, 248 out of 249 passengers on the starships survived the accident. The single casualty was blamed on a heart attack.

● Deirtis See the Light. A race of subterranean extraterrestrials apparently surfaced for the first time in their history thanks to the development of special shields that protected their super-sensitive eyes from the sun.

Their joy was short-lived, however, because virtually every Deirtis who came to the surface suffered horrifying skin burns.

Dr. Canelas said he looks forward to sharing the alien newspaper with scientists and space agencies from around the world.

Granny trapped on bus for 30 years!

A pathetic old woman was finally rescued from a bus where she'd been trapped — for 30 years!

Hortencia del Vecchio, 63, emerged from her prison sobbing and broken after she had been lashed to a seat by heartless relatives for three decades.

"It was the most tragic sight I've ever had eyes on in my life," said Police Chief Raul Santa Cruz of Arroyo Seco, Argentina, where the outrage occurred.

"Rotten food and human waste were strewn all over the bus and as we entered the woman started howling like a wolf.

"When we untied her and lifted her to her feet she fell down."

The poor woman's family admitted they had imprisoned Hortencia in the Number 30 school bus, but they insisted they had done it for her own good.

They said she was said to a hatter and had to be confined so she couldn't hurt herself or others.

"She would throw pots and pans, curse and go into mad rages," said her brother Ernesto, a farm worker.

"She attacked me and her sister Isabel on numerous occasions."

"I didn't know what to do.

BUS Hortencia del Vecchio was tied up in for 30 years.

By SUSAN JAMISON

My uncle said our the best thing was just to tie her up. So we roped her to a seat on the old school bus in a field near our home."

Hortencia's relatives say the woman went mad years ago when her husband died. Her fits of rage were so violent she had to be restrained, but her family were afraid to send her to a mental hospital where she might be mistreated.

So instead they lashed her to the seat of the abandoned bus, tying her at the waist to her chair and binding her hands and feet.

Over the years they brought her food, but the filth around her accumulated as time passed to the point where the bus was absolutely disgusting, officials said.

Passersby had heard moans and whimpering coming from the bus, but assumed a puppy was inside. After years a curious neighbor finally investigated and found Hortencia, crippled and dirty, cowering inside.

"The poor old lady could not speak and was virtually blind," said Dr. Armando Martins Moreira, who was on the scene when Hortencia was rescued.

"I don't know how she managed to stay alive all those years."

POLICE took this photograph of Hortencia del Vecchio, 63, after they discovered her tied to a chair in a bus.

Teen sues parents because he's a nerd

By ALAN PETERS

A failing college student has filed a whopping $20 million lawsuit against his wealthy parents, claiming his bad grades and dismal prospects for the future are a direct result of inferior qualities he inherited from them!

He says it's their fault that he's plain, boring and dumb!

The suit was filed against Jon and Nicole Ludin in Bern, Switzerland, by their son, Karl.

He is a student at a nearby private university and claims that they do owe him a living.

"Karl Ludin has below average looks, less than average intelligence, limited athletic ability, no special talent and no marketable skills," said his attorney, Max Weber.

"In short, Jon and Nicole Ludin brought a child into this world and they are responsible for the fact that the child is competing at a distinct disadvantage," Weber said.

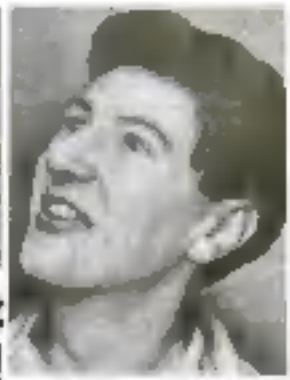
According to the lawsuit, Karl, 19, has gotten through school all his life by attending private institutions where his father's money guaranteed passing grades. But now in his final year of college, Karl has taken a look at the job market and doesn't like what he sees.

"What we have here is a young man who was raised in a privileged environment," said Karl's lawyer in an interview. "His father, Jon Ludin, is a financial consultant whose services are in demand by both private concerns and the government. His mother, in a beautiful woman, but is not that bright."

Weber alleges in the lawsuit that Karl inherited the worst traits of each parent.

"The boy has a pretty mother and he ends up with his father's looks," the attorney said. "He's got an intelligent father, he gets his mother's brains. It isn't fair."

Weber said Switzerland's children's rights law holds parents accountable when their children fail to live up to their full potential.



INGRATE! — Karl Ludin blames his parents because he's a flop at life.

Mom has one triplet in 1987 & the other 2 21 months later!

Airline stewardess Jane Mohr and her hubby Terry are the proud parents of triplets — but two of the children were born nearly two years after the first!

By JOE BERGER

Towheaded toddler Cooper Mohr, 2, came into the world Feb. 15, 1987. His triplet sisters Mollie and Hannah were born Nov. 28, 1988.

"Our babies are truly special, in more ways than one," the Manhattan Beach, Calif., mom told reporters.

The unique babies were conceived back in 1986 during the same test tube fertilization process, using eggs from Jane, 34, and sperm from papa Terry, 42.

Two days later, the embryo that became little Cooper was placed in his mother's womb, where he was carried safely to full term.

Hannah and Mollie were removed from the womb as embryos and kept frozen until early last year, when they were thawed and returned to Jane's womb.

"We used to drive by the hospital and say, 'There's the spot of our family on ice,'" Terry recalled.

Doctors at the Redondo Beach hospital where the babies were born say this was the first multiple pregnancy from a single test tube fertilization.

"The milestone is that there were two pregnancies with the same retrieval of eggs," said Dr. David Meldrum, who supervised the amazing process for the Mohrs.

For nearly two years after they were removed from their mother's womb, Hannah and Mollie were kept frozen in liquid nitrogen at minus 180 degrees centigrade.

Dr. Meldrum said an embryo can be stored at that temperature for many years without harm.

And when Jane and Terry decided it was time to expand their family, little Cooper's sisters were thawed and replaced in Jane's womb. "We are happy, so happy. For us, it's all been a dream come true," said Jane, who'll put several miscarriages early in her marriage and four years of infertility. "It's come to the conclusion that it was the only way we could ever have a family," said the overjoyed mother.

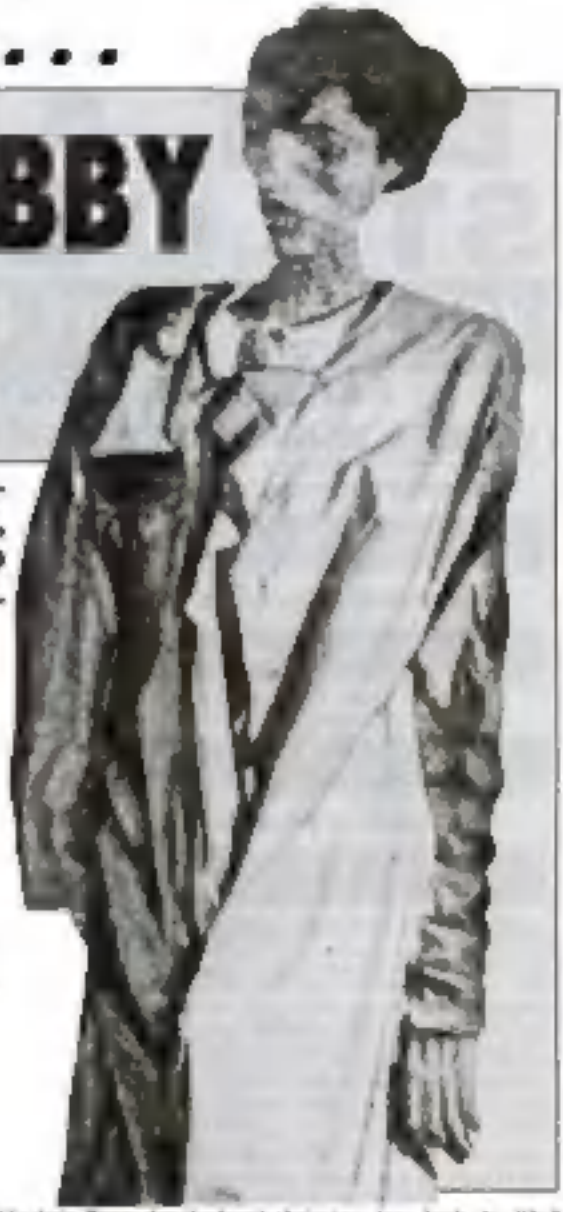
Six years after her death . . .

SHATTERED HUBBY DIGS UP WIFE!



Grieving Fernand Valet couldn't bear the horrifying thought that his beloved wife lay dead in a cold, dark tomb — so six years after her death he dug up her rotted corpse and took it home to be with him.

He tries to bring her back to life with black magic!

The pathetic old man, 82, spent three heartbreaking months trying to revive his mummified mate with black magic rituals and the laying on of hands before police discovered his dark secret.

"He loved her so," said a neighbor in Beuzevillette, France, where the bizarre events unfolded. "The death of his wife must have driven him crazy. He said he was the only one who could save her. He spoke of his powers and insisted that he could resuscitate her."

Marie-Jeanne died at the age of 53 in 1982 of a brain tumor. Her devoted husband was shattered by her death, according to neighbors, and accused the hospital where she had stayed of killing her. He had her buried in the family tomb and wrote a touching epitaph on her tombstone. "My beloved saint, Marie-Jeanne," he wrote. "My most beloved, you will rest in my heart. I will love you all my life."

As the years passed, Fernand became more and more obsessed with his departed wife. He began talking of leaving with his wife and returning to Tretreiux, the province of their birth. He said he would bring her to life again through the occult powers he possessed.

"Nobody paid much attention to the old man," said a neighbor.

"Even when he spoke about his powers in black magic and his readings in the occult, nobody thought it was serious."

Finally, last December, the old man's pining for his lost love drove him to take desperate action.

In the dark of night he went to the village cemetery and hoisted the slab off his wife's tomb. Lovingly, he lifted her coffin from its eternal resting place and trundled the macabre burden home on a wheelbarrow. He placed the crumbling corpse of his cherished wife on a stack of mattresses near his bed.

So that she would be warm, he covered the mattresses securely inside the stuffing from another mattress and covered her lovingly with blankets. Every day the heartbroken husband practiced his magic arts, trying to bring back his wife from the dead. Inside his stuffy room he battled for her against the grave.

"By the time police found the tomb disturbed and went to inform Fernand, he had completely lost his mind," the unidentified neighbor said. "He thought he was succeeding in bringing her back to life."

Authorities entrusted the old man to accompany them to a hospital. In the ambulance, he spoke of nothing but his future with his wife.

He told them he'd soon be leaving to get back to Tretreiux. He would drive his old car and have his beautiful wife by his side.

Trucker tries to douse burning rig by driving it

A trucker whose rig became engulfed in flames drove nine miles down a busy highway — hoping the wind would put out the fire.

Instead, the truck and its cargo were destroyed and the fiery wreckage closed Interstate 5 for three hours, cops in Medford, Oreg., said.

Trucker James Richard Shaw, 38, told police his brakes began smoking and then caught fire.

Shaw explained to authorities that he stopped his truck, got out and tried to douse the flames with a fire extinguisher.

When that failed, he said, he got back into the truck and started driving, hoping in vain that the wind would put out the blaze.

Truant's mom goes off to school with her lazy son

A fed-up mother licked her teenage son's truancy problem when she started following him to school and sitting beside him in class!

Officials in Suffolk, England, said the humiliated 14-year-old boy hasn't missed a day of school since his mother began attending classes with him.

"It was her idea," said Christine Rogers, a school spokeswoman. "She was desperate."

The woman walks her son to school, sits with him through classes and follows him during breaks.

Kill-crazy cult fed human sacrifices to monster crocodile!

TWO trappers pose with monster reptile crocodile that was fattened by more than 100 human sacrifices.

By MICKEY McGUIRE

Trappers have captured a savage 27-foot-long crocodile that ate more than 100 people — who were human sacrifices for a fiendish, kill-crazy cult!

The enormous croc was taken from a pond in the swampy jungles of northern Queensland Australia, along with the crushed skulls and other bones of the men, women and children it had devoured!

"It was like a scene from a ghastly horror movie," said Howard Streeter, a govern-ment game official in the Pinepine River district.

"The point was the cult's human slaughter house. I've seen nothing like it before and I hope I never will again.

"The croc is an enormous male weigh-ing close to two tons. It was confined in a deep-sided pond apparently made by the cult.

"And the pond itself was surrounded by a stone-walled hunt, teeming with other very large crocs.

"A reputed cult member has confessed that the bones are those of people who were kidnapped from remote vil-lages to be sacrifices to the croc, which the cult worshiped as a god."

2-ton reptile ate more than 100 people!

Streeter said district police learned of the mad cult's bar-baric activities from the brother of a teenage girl who was kidnapped from her home in broad daylight.

"He happened to arrive home just in time to see three men dragging her off into the jungle," Streeter explained. He followed them to their village settlement about 15 miles from the Pinepine River.

"When he told us what had happened we went in a squad of armed police and arrested eight cult members. But [illegible] the leaders and at least 25 others escaped into the jungle.

"I think we about 36 hours to organize and stage our assault on the stronghold. After it was all over we found no trace of the lost croc.

"But our trappers found the pond right away and we launched out a dare to drain the pond. That's when we found the bones of at least 100 people that had been fed to the beast. It was horrible."

Streeter said the cult is be-lieved to be a band of savages who had been driven out of their village temple of the ancient croc god.

Apparently they had been sacrificing animals to appease the croc. Streeter said. And when the croc be-gan killing the villagers be-cause they associated humans with food, the cult got the boot. Cult-fed a few years it we had reminded the cult members of up. But we didn't.

"Now all we can do is try to think there and we're not be-cause they first threatened an-

Sylvester Stallone's sad and shocking confession:

I'M RICH, FAMOUS AND UNHAPPY

In a sad and shocking revelation, super rich, super famous macho man Sylvester Stallone confesses that he'll never be able to find true happiness.

Incredibly, the $100 million man who has made his movie alter egos Rocky and Rambo big screen legends feels trapped in his own muscle-bound mold.

He keeps getting offers to play light-tipped tough guys and he's tired of them.

"I feel as though I haven't accomplished anything," sighs the silver screen superstar.

"I don't feel satisfied at all. My mind is constantly questioning.

"What next? Where to? Why now?" he says.

Even his incredible wealth hasn't been able to buy him happiness.

Sly shakes his head sadly at all the requests for money that he gets, knowing that gold hasn't brought him happiness.

"People think the material goods I can buy them will salvage their souls or that's the way it is. The die has been cast, that's your mold, go with it, churn out your movies, take the money and run.

"That would be very relaxing. But I can't.

"There'll be no sense of peace ever. I've definitely brought myself to that conclusion. This is one business where you can be absolutely sure your next film will fail. It makes me sad. But it's been an extraordinary life. I just wish that I had been there to enjoy it." — Esquire magazine.

"I wasn't the slightest bit nervous working with it. All I wanted to know was when it had last been fed. They said it was just two days earlier, so I wasn't worried. Boas aren't dangerous unless they're hungry." — Playboy

Sly's problem is that he's a driven man who can't rest on his laurels. He wants to expand and do new things, but he's stuck in the Rambo rut. The roles he's offered are to play musclebound, disoriented hunks.

"I had a tray with 15 drinks precariously balanced on it and before I realized what was happening, Sally grabbed one of the drinks and the whole tray dumped in her lap.

"Her husband crept forward and called me every name in the book. I went outside and had a good cry."

But the story has a happy ending.

Men — marriage can make you sick!

. . . but it makes wives fit as a fiddle, survey shows

By SUSAN JAMISON

Wives are all smiles after they walk down the aisle — but marriage makes their husbands sick, a new study shows!

While women report that wedded life makes them feel fitter than ever, men say they suffer from more headaches, stomach pains and blood pressure problems after they say "I do."

In a report presented before West Germany's Institute for Marriage and Family Research, scientists revealed the results of a survey of 1,421 couples about their health since marriage.

Nearly 80 percent of wives said they felt "full of life" now that they were wed, but only 48 per cent remembered feeling that way about their new mate.

Men [illegible] bored [illegible]. While 41 percent of the husbands [illegible] said they regretted being [illegible] as bachelors, only 14 percent of brides [illegible] wished they were single again after walking down the aisle.

The men reported twice as many headaches as before marriage, their stomach problems doubled and problems with high blood pressure trebled. But whereas nine in five wives had stomach problems before marriage, that number was cut in half after the wedding.

Women feel better as wives because they usually take charge of home," said psychologist Michael Lorenz, who organized the research.

Ancient meteorite hit the Earth with force of a trillion A-bombs!

A gigantic dent in a European country was made when a monster meteorite slammed into the Earth 100 million years ago, says a top scientist.

The 200-mile wide basin that covers most of western Czechoslovakia wasn't singled out by scientists before as anything but a natural formation of the Earth.

But Michael D. Papagiannis [illegible] Boston University, says the basin is really a crater that was formed when a 20-mile-wide meteorite rocketed into the Earth 100 million years ago.

"The impact would be the equivalent of 1 trillion Hiroshima atom bombs," he said.

Papagiannis said the Proto Basin is much too large to be noticed by people on the Earth.

Leech saliva is miracle drug for heart victims

There's new hope for heart attack and stroke victims — now that the lowly leech has come to the rescue.

The powerful anticoagulant [illegible] through the attacking patient's body, wiping out any life-threatening blood clots that form during a stroke or heart attack.

"Hirudin has been shown to be a fantastic patient," said Dr. Peter Markwardt, a scientist who helped develop the miracle leech drug for the CIBA-GEIGY drug company.

"A very small amount [illegible] the body's clotting agents," the doctor said.

Hirudin is so powerful, in fact, that it is found only in extremely small amounts in leeches. It would take the saliva of 10,000 leeches to produce enough of the substance to treat one patient with one injection, experts say.

To overcome the delay, researchers learned to duplicate the genetic code of the secret ingredient in the leech's saliva. Then scientists [illegible] the ingredient artificially.

"Now that we have cloned the substance, we can make as much as we like," said Dr. Robert Wallis, who heads the department of biology in the British Research Lab of CIBA-GEIGY.

"We can make kilograms of it if we want to.

"It's a very exciting breakthrough for us."

Superglue suicide!

By IRWIN FISHER

A 23-year-old man was so determined to kill himself with exhaust fumes from his car that he superglued his hands to the steering wheel so he couldn't change his mind!

[redacted] sticks hands to steering wheel then kills himself with exhaust fumes!

"It's the wildest suicide method I've ever seen in my 25 years as a cop," Police Lt Birger Nilsson told reporters in Malmo, Sweden.

"The man [redacted] had no history of psychological problems and [redacted] was totally unprepared for [redacted]

[redacted] Rose drove to the model train park in Malmo and ran a garden hose from the exhaust pipe through the passenger side window.

[redacted] He sat still, waiting to die, then realized it was impossible to get out of the car.

"He was obviously desperate to have another change of mind," said Lt Nilsson. "It probably took 10 to 12 minutes before the exhaust fumes overcame him."

So he had plenty of time to think about what he was doing."

Investigators refused to describe the suicide scene in detail but they did say it looked like Rose had struggled to free his hands.

"But there was no way he could have escaped at that point," said a police officer. "Unless he really had cut the steering wheel free or perhaps his hands could get to the body out of the car."

The dead man's parents were the proprietors of shops and hotels in Malmo. They couldn't bring themselves to discuss the incident with reporters.

[redacted] Rose, single, kept [redacted] apartment [redacted] Denmark. [redacted] a happy-go-lucky guy and never seemed to let anything bother him. I guess he wasn't as happy as he seemed. Enough so he wouldn't have gone through with a horrible death like [redacted]."

Daddy's piggyback leap saves daughter from [redacted] floor fire

A father saved himself and his [redacted] daughter from death in their burning apartment when he leaped from a second-story window — with the child [redacted] on his back.

The 15-foot drop crushed 31-year-old Harrison Bennett's ankles and broke both legs. But the 30-pound daughter Vanessa was unharmed.

The hero dad said he awoke to his baby-sitter [redacted] apartment when he began coughing from the dense smoke that filled his bedroom.

Flames had already engulfed the hallway outside his bedroom door and the heat outside a back window so thrusted [redacted] and told her to hold on tight to the neck for the surge to safety [redacted] the window of the apartment building.

"I only did what any father would do for his daughter," Bennett said from his hospital bed.

[redacted] all again in a wrought. She's a princess to me."

Junior daredevil

Tracy Mitchell Davis stunned his parents when he took his new bicycle out for its first spin — and the 2-year-old promptly launched into an amazing display of stunt riding! His folks say they don't know where the Indianapolis tot has learned his daring new tricks.

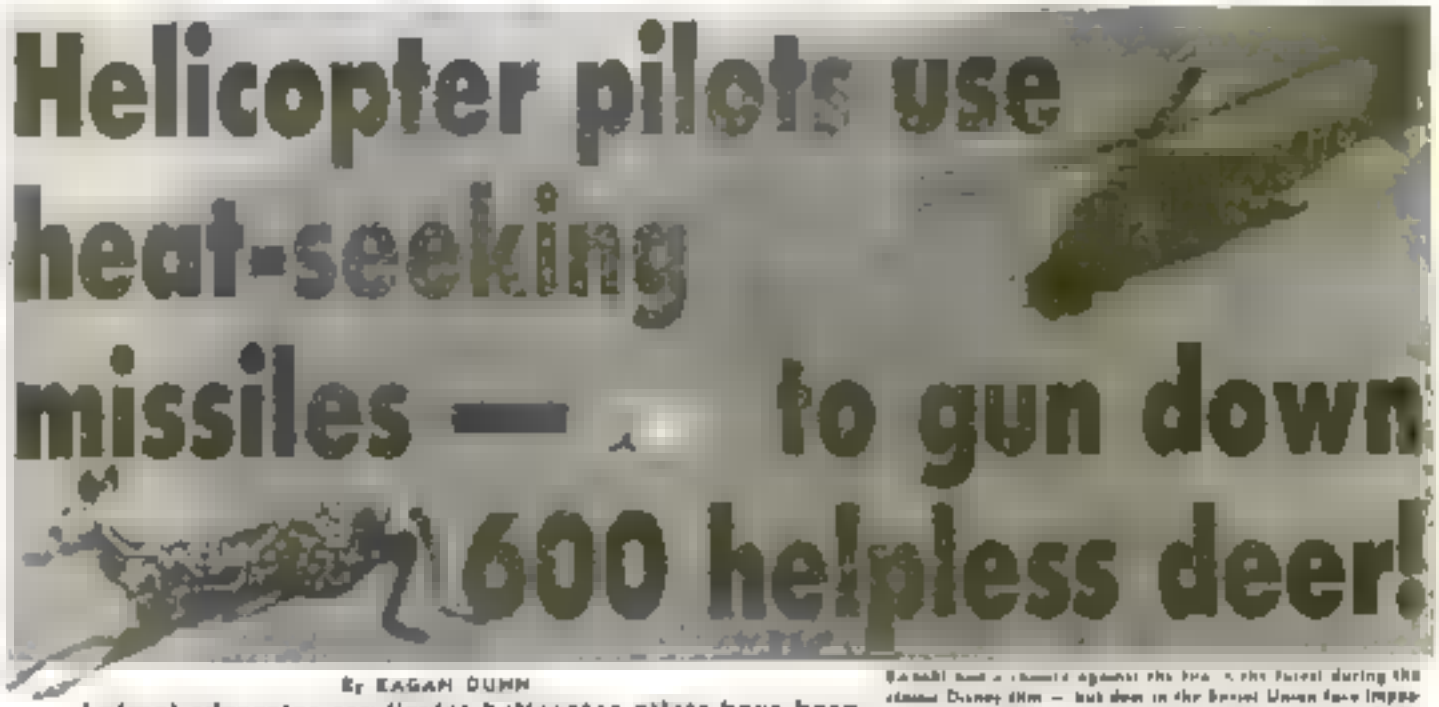
Animal outrage in the Soviet Union!

Helicopter pilots use heat-seeking missiles — to gun down 600 helpless deer!



By EAGAN DUNN

Animal advocates say Soviet helicopter pilots have been vaporizing deer with heat-seeking missiles in one of the most horrifying abuses of military firepower on record!

The weapons are so sensitive, say experts, that they can detect, pursue and annihilate even the smallest deer at distances up to 3,000 feet.

"This is an outrage," Marc Kruger, the animal rights activist, told reporters in Brussels, Belgium.

"These pilots have killed at least 600 deer in the past three months and there is no indication that the carnage will stop.

"It's one thing to kill a deer with a rifle," he added. "But these men are blowing them off the face of the Earth with weapons that could down jumbo jets."

Soviet officials confirmed Kruger's report but insisted that the pilots and crews who participated in the operation had been fired and disciplined "months ago."

Kruger angrily called the Soviet explanation a bunch of hogwash and said he could prove that Soviet pilots are continuing to blast the helpless creatures with the deadly missiles while flying maneuvers over Siberia.

He then produced photographs that show a helicopter annihilating an entire herd of deer on January 24.

"These pictures are truly enough to turn your stomach," said Kruger.

"The first shows a deer herd trudging through Siberian snow.

"The next three photos show a helicopter firing a missile.

"And the last two show a burst of flame and smoke and then a hole in the ground."

Lisa Weiss, president and founder of the Paris-based Animal Now is also aware of Soviet helicopter crew exercises.

In fact, he has called for international condemnation of the missile-to-deer killings.

"The Russians are no better than the animals they've been killing and people everywhere ought to say so," said Weiss.

"I guess that is what happens when an entire society is atheistic. They don't give a damn about anything. They blow helpless little deer to smithereens just for the heck of it."

KITCHEN SHOCKER!

Refrigerator zaps housewife — but quick-thinking son saves her life!

By AMBER ST. JOHN

A young mom had a terrifying brush with death when she became the helpless prisoner of a paralyzing electric current that surged through her body — when she touched her refrigerator!

Pretty, 26-year-old Kelly Billingsley probably would have died of heart failure if her quick-thinking son Patrick hadn't knocked her hand off the refrigerator.

"The refrigerator grabbed me and just held me so that I couldn't move," Kelly told The NEWS from her trailer home in Hollister Springs, Missouri. "I was shaking like crazy and it was zapping me pretty good."

A hospital emergency room physician said Kelly's life hung by a thread as the 110 volts of current flowed through her body.

"She had a cardiac arrest because the electrical current that operates the heart muscles," he told The NEWS. "At that point she most likely would have suffered heart failure."

Kelly's chilling ordeal began as she was washing dishes while Patrick was playing on the floor and her husband Jerry was with a neighbor next door.

"I had my hand on a stainless steel dishwasher and I reached with my other hand and grabbed the refrigerator door," she explained.

"All of a sudden, I felt myself being zapped. I felt my face struggling, but I couldn't move a muscle.

"Then Patrick jumped up and knocked me loose off the refrigerator. I know that if I had been alone when I got shocked, I would have died. Patrick saved my life."

Kelly said her husband later found that

Man killed by stump

An elderly Sacramento, Calif., man was killed instantly by a tree stump.

Delbert Boggs, 78, had one end of a rope attached to his truck and the other end to the stump, which popped out of the ground and hit him.

Chicken lays golden egg!

A Chinese peasant told authorities in Beijing that one of his chickens has laid a golden egg "on at least three occasions during the night of the full moon."

The elderly farmer said each egg was the size of a regular egg but that it weighed close to a pound.

Woman hasn't slept in 30 years!

Thirty years ago, Ines Fernandez yawned — and she hasn't slept another wink since.

Now this woman, whose incredible ordeal has made medical history, prays for death, when she will at last be able to close her eyes in restful eternal sleep.

Unkempt and fragile from the ravages of her sleepless years, the 57-year-old insomniac spends each night in a chair, dressed in a nightgown and waiting for the dawn.

"In the silence and night here, I feel so ashamed. I am the only person alive in the world who has not slept. God has given me a curse to bear.

"Oh how I wish I could remember what sleep was like."

Her sleepless battle with death began 30 years ago in 1938 when the 27-year-old Ines — then a newly-wed and a teaching children in her home village of Sorraia in Zaragoza, Spain, yawned deeply.

"I remember it as well," she said. "I got a very strange feeling in my head. I thought little of it at the time, but I haven't been able to go to sleep since that time."

Dr Fabian Abril, one of Spain's top neurosurgeons, has studied Ines' case for years and has written several medical papers on her.

"After months of tests, I came to the conclusion that she is suffering from an extremely rare condition," he said.

"This impaired the sleep centres of her brain and produced fatal insomnia."

He explained that sleeplessness doesn't damage health because the body can function with little or no sleep.

"There is nothing we could do for her but attempt to cure her condition without putting her in great danger, so she must just continue to live without sleep," Dr Abril said.

But life for Ines is an unbearable torment of waiting and praying for her nightmare to end.

During the day, the tasteless arrival her little white-washed cottage racing for about 20 village children. But after they go home she faces another long night without sleep.

Ines never married and she has no family still alive to help ease her solitary burden.

"I just sit in my room with my rosary, praying to my dear God for mercy. I say 'Oh, my beloved Jesus, Free me from prison. Please!' Left the cross that has burdened me for so many years."

Sometimes — during the worst — I know that I will close my eyes in eternal sleep. My nightmare will be over. It will be a blessing. I will embrace with all my heart."

Abortion protesters goof — they picket nuns' home!

Outraged anti-abortion protesters thought they were picketing the home of an abortion clinic employee — but their anger turned to embarrassment when they learned the home was actually occupied by two Catholic nuns!

About a dozen abortion fighters marched in front of the Buffalo, N.Y., home carrying placards and singing "Ave Maria" (Hail Mary).

But they stopped quietly away when they learned they'd mistakenly targeted the home of two Catholic sisters. No one could explain how the mistake was made.

"They really messed up," said Delores Tinnerello who owns the home rented by the nuns.

Victim picks rapist's sentence & she lets him off easy!

A 60-year-old woman who was raped in her home was allowed by the judge to choose the sentence her attacker would serve — and she chose the shortest one.

The woman, a great-grandmother in Minneapolis, Minn., asked the judge to give her 25-year-old attacker a 41½-year term. She could have chosen an 8-year sentence or a 9-year term because that means her attacker James Halvorsen, couldn't change his guilty plea and stand trial, but had to go directly to jail. If he had changed his plea, he could have been out of jail on hand.

"I knew it could be months before there'd be a trial," said the victim. "The only thing I wanted to know is if he would

Skydiving pair die together when parachute fails

Two sky divers died because the parachute they were sharing didn't open until they hit the ground.

Daniel Batchelor, 34, and Jane Uber, 32, were pronounced dead in a Toronto park after they fell from 10,000 feet, authorities in Homestead, Fla., said.

The pair were strapped together for a tandem jump, a technique used for beginning novices to skydiving.

Their main parachute failed and the backup chute didn't open until impact with the ground.

Lousy lotteries are ruining lives all over the country!

Editors: I'm sitting here so mad I can't think because of what's happened to my poor sister, and it's all because of those lousy lotteries. I think the lottery is the worst, most disgraceful idea man has ever come up with and it's ruining lots of lives.

My sister and her husband had been married for 37 years and even though they had no children they had a very good marriage. My brother-in-law, Hugh, took his own life last night. He went to work in the mill every day and was glad to do it.

Hey Sly:

Have you got a frog in your throat?

Editors: Sylvester Stallone has a nice set of muscles, but he always looks to me like he's got a frog sitting up his throat — a real, live, croaking frog.

P.S. I'd be more than happy to volunteer my services any time.

Give those poor hungry pussycats a break!

Editors: Admit it — you people are rat haters. You take every opportunity to write something that puts pussycats in a bad light. Your recent story about the rat that ate the movie star mouse was just another example. That cat was hungry or he wouldn't have done it.

Not long ago, you ran a sickening story about some hungry cats that ate the body of their owner, who was an old lady who died and didn't leave them anything else to eat. Again, those poor animals were hungry.

I caught my hubby in the sack with our gardener

Dear Dotti: I am a decent 26-year-old girl who is like putty in the hands of my sleazeweiser 58-year-old husband.

He runs me like errands, gripes about the house and treats me harsh in bitter bear. And he has stopped hugging the closet sex.

Last week I came home early and there was my husband rolling in the hay with our middle-aged gardener. They declared it was just a harmless exercise, like I was sick in my stomach because

Drug clinic ads just frighten people to make $$

Editors: One of your readers wrote recently complaining about the slipped TV commercials that lawyers run trying to drum up business.

SEATTLE — Eleanor Rose stared silently at the photo of the body of the man who murdered her daughter nearly 15 years ago, then said, "Ted Bundy's dead, thank God. This picture makes me weep for joy."

In an interview in her tiny home located in a working-class neighborhood of Seattle Mrs. Rose said she strongly supported the decision of The NEWS to publish the stark picture of Bundy after his execution in Florida's electric chair.

Our millionaire's story is truly remarkable. Out of a job and lonely, penniless in his native land, he sought the help of a spiritualist who revealed to him a closely guarded secret, centuries old. He received a lucky talisman in the shape of a pyramid which contained his birthstone. The poor-to-be millionaire was told to keep it close to his heart and his luck would change. That was many years ago. Today, his homes and all treasures alone are worth millions. And the quickest birthstone, thanks to the power of the birthstone in the pyramid.

The key to the power of the talisman is in the genuine birthstone. It could be your birthstone you will get a genuine crystal pearl (not hollowed!) grown from a living oyster by death-defying divers who must penetrate shark-infested waters to find the growing, rare pearl. This millionaire will pass along to you the very substances that Cleopatra, the Roman Emperors and anointed rulers of the Holy Roman Empire were centuries ago to conquer and rule. These birthstones have the exact molecular and atomic structure as the gems first discovered by the ancient people of Atlantis and passed on to the Pharaohs of Egypt.

Depending on your month of birth, you have special positive and negative forces which your birthstone will neutralize to enhance your life forces and bring you the success you desire and rightly deserve.

'Bundy never looked better'

PATRONS at Billy Bob's Longhorn Lounge in Lake City, home of one of Bundy's victims, jeered when they saw the pictures of the mass killer's corpse after he was executed in the electric chair

. . . says vengeful town

Lake City, Fla. — "Ted Bundy never looked better," said Ricky Crawford. Then he crushed out his cigarette on the picture of the mad dog killer taken shortly after he was electrocuted.

Cruel and vindictive barbs rang out at Billy Bob's Longhorn Lounge in Lake City, home of Kimberly Leach, the youngest and last of a possible 100 young women the monster murdered.

Folks at Billy Bob's and around the little north Florida city waited almost 10 long, frustrating years for revenge — and the photo of Bundy's body soothed their hearts.

"They should have strapped him down in the chair, taped a stack of dynamite with a long fuse to his body and watched him splatter until it blew his chest open," said Billy Bob's part-owner Pat Davis.

That's the best picture of Bundy I've ever seen," said J.T. Spencer as he splashed a beer on the photo. "I only wish he could have suffered longer."

They were wiped the smile off his face," said Matt Willis as he stared at the photo. "They should have shaved a cross on his forehead and kept on cutting until there was nothing left."

If there is a bright silver lining to the passing of Bundy, it is that he will never be able to kill another girl.

And we're glad he's finally gone."

MIRACLE DRUG CURES THE DEAF

A new miracle cure for deafness is being made from a common Japanese tree.

The wonder drug, marketed under the name Ginkobin or Tebonin in West Germany is not yet available in the United States, but anyone who needs it can get it with the cooperation of a physician. The NEWS

Substance from a common tree offers new hope for millions with hearing loss has learned. For the 21 million people in America who suffer from hearing impairment, the miracle medication offers new hope. Recent clinical trials conducted by Internist Institute of Ettlingen, West Germany found that 39 of 50 people treated with the extract of the Japanese Ginkgo tree better hearing from one of the drug. One in four of the patients — who suffered from moderate to severe hearing loss — regained their hearing in full.

One in three reported that their hearing was improved and in many cases tinnitus — noises in the ear — completely disappeared. The drug is known generically as Ginkgo Biloba," said a medical spokesman for Internist. "Our clinical trials demonstrated that it is remarkably effective."

"Right now the drug is available in Germany and France, but it is not yet on the market in the United States."

An FDA spokesman said that the drug may be obtained here, however. Patients have only to ask their doctor to file out a special "Compassionate IND" form to the appropriate from the FDA to use the medication for treatment.

Ginkgo is taken orally, in pill or drop form. It is made from the dried leaves of the Japanese tree and works by producing better blood flow throughout the body.

"If the hearing loss is caused by blood flow problems in the ear, the drug can really help," the Internist spokesman said.

"Our studies were done with people who suffered from sensorial loss, arterial sclerosis and tinnitus.

"The study lasted an average of nine weeks for each patient."

Bullet is a real headache

A 50-year-old man went to the hospital complaining of a headache and found out that he had been shot in the head.

Fernando Villegas of New York City waited nine hours for treatment at Lincoln Hospital in the Bronx before a doctor arranged for a CAT scan and found the bullet in his brain.

Officials said the old man had no idea he had been shot. He was finally admitted to the hospital and was in critical but stable condition after the bullet was removed, a spokesman said.

Hundreds of people flock each morning to a park in Bangkok, Thailand, to gulp down a bizarre concoction which they believe improves their health — it's their daily dose of Scotch laced with the blood of a king cobra!

While it may not tantalise the taste-buds of the Western world it has been an unfailing prescription for good health in Southeast Asia for centuries.

Youths find bandit's booty in the woods

Five kids went exploring in the woods one afternoon and were home 10 minutes later with their pots full of money — about $6,000 in all!

Police in Austin, Tex., said the children probably won't get to keep the loot, though, because it apparently was stolen during a market holdup days earlier.

The lost-and-found adventure began when antique store owner Mary Bailey sent her two kids and three of their friends out of her store because they were restless. They dashed off to the woods to let steam and quickly stumbled onto the money.

The kids rounded up about $5,000 and took it to Mrs. Bailey, asking her to call the police. Investigators said the robbers either dropped the loot or stashed it there.

Jilted gal goes ape and runs over beau

Stan Jenkins flipped her lid when her fiance called off their date to go out with a pal — and ran the poor guy down with her car.

"I'm never going to speak to her again," said Ian Jenkins, 20, of Pontypridd, Wales, who broke off their engagement after the attack.

"The chase was terrifying. I was screaming like a wildman and was white with shock."

Angry Stan, 19, ran out of the house, leaped into her car and tried to mow Ian and his pal down as they walked on a sidewalk. They leaped for safety, but Stan came after them again driving the wrong way down a one-way street.

Finally, she chased Ian onto a bridge and drove into him as he backed against a supporting beam. He suffered a broken leg and bruises.

Stan confessed to reckless driving and assault and is awaiting sentencing.

Broke mom kills her kids and herself

A young housewife was cut down in the dumps over being broke that she killed her four young kids — and then took her own life.

Sheila Taylor's body along with those of her children Casey Ann, 8, Shannon, 6, Mandy, 3, and Jamie, 19 months, were discovered by her husband, Greg, and Sheriff Robert Hall in Methos, Ill.

The mom was hospitalized for shock.

Authorities believe spending bills were behind 27-year-old Mrs. Taylor's killing spree.

The woman took her 4-year-old daughter into the bathroom and drowned her in the tub. Then, she bathed the girls in the store hoping to kill her other children. When that failed, she took a gun and shot each one in the head before shooting herself in the head, said police.

Police and paramedics said they found the mom and her three kids "sitting in a row . . . all tidied up in a row" on the living room couch.

PRIEST IS FRIED TO A CRISP . . .

FLYING 800-pound pig explodes bursts into flames as a priest tries to free it from the devil

After 'possessed' pig bursts into flames during a bizarre exorcism!

An ill-fated priest was trying to exorcise the devil from a raging, 800-pound hog when the berserk boar suddenly burst into flames — burning both the pig and the priest to a crisp!

"That pig was standing there hissing and snarling at Father Fontela like a wild beast," witness Jesus Sanz told reporters outside Cordoba, Spain.

"All of a sudden the pig started flying around the barn, and then he just erupted in flames.

"It was as if the devil himself lit the fire.

"The next thing I knew the entire barn was on fire and the Father was screaming in agony. I tried to get in there but there was no way I could save him."

The spine-chilling tale began a week earlier when Juan, 48, became convinced his prize hog Hernando was possessed by the devil.

"Everything was fine one night, but the next morning I went out there and that pig had turned into something out of a horror movie," the flabbergasted farmer recalled.

"His eyes kept changing from bright red to bright green to bright red again. And when I entered the sty to feed him, he attacked me like a crazed dog and almost killed me. I had to run for my life.

"That afternoon I was watching him storm around the yard, raging and bellowing, and all of a sudden he became a serpent right before my eyes.

"Moments later he was a big again — but I knew right then I had to get help," flustered Juan called Father Luis Fontela, 38, and asked him to perform an exorcism on his evil sinner, but the priest told him it wouldn't be appropriate to exorcise a hog.

"Four days later Hernando broke out of his sty and attacked my 13-year-old son Ignacio and almost tore off his ear," Juan said.

"I knew then that I had to call in the priest again and this time he agreed to do the exorcism."

It was the last mistake the dedicated young priest would ever make.

The next morning, wide-eyed Juan peered into his barn through a small window as Father Fontela began performing an exorcism rite over the possessed pig. "At first Hernando seemed calm, but after a few minutes he started acting crazy, hissing and snarling like a tiger ready to attack," the farmer recalled.

"I wanted the Father to get out of there right then, but he stayed. Then Hernando started flying around the barn and suddenly he burst into flames. I even saw an image of Satan in the fire — I'm sure of it!

"Within seconds, both Hernando and Father Fontela were burned to a crisp."

Any more complaints by Jon, Dennis, 57, or Dorothy, 59, could bring fines up to £1,000, the judge threatened.

Busty 8-year-old daughter matured too fast — so dad had her sterilized!

By R.J. MATFIELD

Now she's suing for $1.5M

A super-strict dad has his busty daughter sterilized because he feared she'd get pregnant — though she was only 8 years old at the time and still playing with dolls.

Now that she's 21, she's fighting mad and suing for $1.5 million.

"My parents — particularly my father — deprived me of my right to have a baby," explained the bitter daughter, Heike Baur of Dortmund, West Germany. "This is the greatest crime that can be committed against a woman."

Her wealthy dad, a wealthy industrialist and a powerful figure in neo-Nazi political movements, claims doctors advised the operation because the girl was reaching premature puberty.

"As the age of 8 she was a beautiful child with long blonde hair — and the voluptuous figure of a teenager," said Konrad Baur, 71.

"Then — not just young hairs but green ones — were growing her wait whenever she strolled down the street. Some of those perverts even tried to lure her into going with them to dark bars.

"Yes, she was only a little girl but she had the body of a woman — and I was terrified of the possible consequences for any child."

Heike responded: "My parents had no right to do that to me when I was a helpless child.

"And now, I can never have a child of my own."

Anger — the emotion that kills

Angry people die young

A fascinating new study concludes that hostile, cynical folks are five times as likely to die before the age of 50 than sweet-tempered people.

The study, conducted by Dr. Redford B. Williams of Duke University, followed a group of 256 lawyers for 25 years and found that of those born a Type A who personality suffered from high blood pressure and heart disease — or was the angry one.

Dr. Williams concluded that hostile personality traits were probably inherited at birth and reflected a nervous system that acts differently from people who were more easy going.

"There is no evidence that Type A personality, meaning the workaholic, competitive, job-involved person, predicts premature death. But there is lots of evidence that hostility and anger do," Dr. Williams said.

Clean toilet competition uncovers lots of stinkers

Competition was fierce in Turkey recently when the nation's Yalcin Foundation announced they would give an award for the best-kept potties in the land.

"Our purpose is to establish modern toilet-care habits and a toilet technology in line with Western standards," said a spokesman for the Ankara foundation. Reha Yamalgil.

After a nationwide search of latrines and restrooms, 12 winners were selected.

Awards went to gas stations, public toilet facilities and hotels.

Unfortunately, however, a lot of eateries remained up in places where pristine potties might be expected.

"No hospitals, dentists or schools were found worthy of the award," said a disappointed Yamalgil.

Kid dies playing weird 'dog' game

A playful 8-year-old boy pretending to be a dog looped a nylon belt around his neck for a leash — and choked to death!

Manford Platt was playing with his little brother, Ty, 5, in their home in St. Theresa Point, Canada, at the time of the tragedy.

"They were playing when somehow the belt tightened around his neck," said Ken Wood, chief of the St. Theresa Point Indian tribe.

"I guess Manford started to freak out and all of a sudden something snapped and Manford stopped breathing," he said.

"There was no way to get under the belt to cut it off," Wood said.

Incredible breakthrough reverses aging!

DEEP CLING in penetrating experiments, Russian doctors drug drugs of energetic drug directly into the organs of their patients. They say the has actually grown younger during the past 42 years

DOCS MAKE OLD MAN YOUNG!

By COLIN McMAHON

In 1947, Russian scientists began giving 102-year-old Victor Worshenski a drug they believed would reverse the body's aging process.

He's grown back all his hair and all of his teeth

Now almost 42 years later, Worshenski is still alive — and he is growing younger with every passing day!

A full report on the astonishing achievement was made available by Soviet researcher Dr. Ivan Fedyaninitsky, who gave up his post at the Institute of Gerontology in Kiev and defected to the West.

Dr. Fedyaninitsky was one of the key figures of a 126-member team of gerontologists who have devoted their lives to the work of finding a way to retard, halt and reverse the unstoppable process that makes people grow old.

"It took many, many years of painstaking experiments before we were able to perfect the process of injecting drugs in the veins of young people," Dr. Fedyaninitsky explained. "We found a drug which could stop aging in its tracks, old cells get rejuvenated, the growth of new cells increases and the overall vitality of the patient is greatly improved.

"After Worshenski received the drug in 1947 — 1948 — he started growing younger. His hair, which had turned white when he was 60 years old, began to grow back its natural color. His teeth, which had fallen out, began to grow back. His sex drive increased. He looked and acted like a man of 45.

"The dark brown hair he had in his youth has grown back and he again has a full set of teeth. He started to walk like a young man and he again has normal sexual desires.

Dr. Fedyaninitsky said some of the elderly people who had been injected with the drug died of heart failure, but most of the patients who received the drug are living normal lives.

The scientist said that after Russian troops occupied Berlin at the end of World War II, Soviet officials found the records of Hitler's personal physicians and the scientists began experimenting with the drug.

"Hitler, like most dictators, was afraid of dying and he spared no expense in trying to find a way to keep the evil of the so-called master race from growing old and dying.

"Records of these experiments were found in the Fuehrer's bunker after he committed suicide in April, 1945, and we began our own pursuit of the secret of eternal youth

Gate latch kills oldster

An old man died tragically when he slipped on an icy sidewalk — and was stabbed to death by a gate latch!

Theresa Jeanne Spallina Bratcher, 68, had been drinking, police said, and mistakenly walked up his neighbor's sidewalk. When he turned to walk back, he fell into his neighbor's gate latch and the 6-inch latch pierced his head.

The man died instantly, according to Cheshire police.

Corpses sent off in style in bizarre custom coffins

By JOE BERGER

When the people of Ghana slip off to their heavenly reward, they do it in high style — in ceremonial caskets shaped like anything from a cow to a corn cob to a Cadillac!

Many of the West African nation's ordinal designer coffins are carved by master carpenter Paa Joe in the village of Dartmouth, whose customers oversee the creations while they're alive — so they're assured they'll be laid to rest with proper flair.

One of Joe's most recent masterpieces was a blue and silver casket in the shape of a sardine, complete with lifelike scales, fins and black eyes circled in red.

"This sardine was to show people that my father was a proud and successful fisherman," said Mrs. Lydia Commey, whose dad was buried in the shiny casket.

Those who can afford the price to splurge out of a high-style designer coffin usually choose a shape that's symbolic of their life's work or their hobby.

In recent months, Paa Joe, 41, has turned out coffins shaped like a cola, a camera, a cobra, a bus an airplane and a Mercedes-Benz.

Would-be thief swipes car and boy, say cops

A would-be car thief hopped into a car parked with the motor running and drove off without realizing that the other occupant of the front seat was a real live blind boy and not a teddy bear, say cops.

The 10-year-old boy was sitting in the car in front of a lot in Paul Main, dog alone, waiting for his dad when the bandit jumped in and drove off.

Police said the confused crook drove around for a half an hour trying to calm the boy and figure out how to return him. Finally, the boy was dropped off at a corner. Police said they arrested a suspect.

Jealous wife gets revenge on cheatin' hubby by giving him AIDS!

By RAGAN QUINN

A heartbroken young lab assistant intentionally got AIDS and passed it on to her husband — because he was having an affair with another woman!

"This is the most bizarre case I've ever handled," police lt. Pierre Cassin told reporters in Paris. "We can't charge this woman with murder because her husband isn't dead!

"She did give him AIDS and he is going to die. But that could take years. I hate to say it, but if people like this lady committed the perfect crime."

Catherine Marie, 28, claimed herself victim after her ill-fated husband, Louis, was diagnosed as having AIDS on January 12.

At a meeting at the cheating husband's home, the wife said she told him AIDS ruined their sex life and that's when he told her that he had been having an affair with another woman.

Cassin said Catherine then told her husband that she had AIDS and that she was going to give everyone AIDS.

Louis Marie refused to take the test but was told by doctors that he had AIDS.

Cassin said Catherine Marie was charged with attempted murder, but was released because she was not expected to live long enough to stand trial.

Cassin said he didn't believe Catherine Marie had ever been involved in prostitution.

Cassin said Catherine Marie had been a model wife and mother before her husband's affair.

Mountain villagers see band of heavenly angels

By JOHN PUGH

A group of villagers followed a trail of shining footprints in the snow — and ran into a band of dazzling angels!

The Italian villagers say they were overcome with awe when they saw the group. Dressed in white robes and sandals, the angels were singing hymns of praise to God.

"We have been overjoyed by the news that the Prince of Peace has been born," said one villager. "The angels told us that we must go to Bethlehem to take food."

The villagers said they followed the angels' instructions and found the baby Jesus in a manger.

Twin feels all the pain of brother's heart bypass surgery!

A 47-year-old man was hospitalized in agony while his twin was undergoing heart bypass surgery — because he suffered the incredible pain of his brother's operation in his own home 150 miles away!

Carpet salesman Sandor Nemeth was rushed into intensive care at a hospital in Baks, Hungary, with symptoms of low blood pressure, blood loss and respiratory distress.

His twin Karoly was later found to have suffered the same symptoms during his 10-hour bypass surgery, a world press service said.

"Mr Nemeth was screaming, he was in terrible pain," said Dr Janos Hayasi, who supervised Nemeth's care. "Apparently he could feel every cut of the knife that invaded his brother's body — and he died 3 days [illegible] of complications at the same time."

We had no idea what was wrong with him, but fortunately we were able to help him and get him out of danger. Then, when we visited his brother in his ward at 3am in call him, Mr Nemeth was in the hospital, we found out about the twin's operation."

Nemeth told doctors he'd been relaxing at home when his heart suddenly began.

"At first I thought I was having a heart attack," he told his doctors. "But the pain was searing.

"I felt faint and weak and the pain seemed to go deeper and deeper. It was like some one was hacking away at me cutting me open."

Only after he was out of intensive care did Nemeth learn that his twin brother Karoly had undergone an emergency by-pass op. Budapest.

We believe that a strong [illegible]

He experienced every cut of the knife — without the anesthesia!

[illegible] that makes it possible for them to share things even though they are far apart," Dr Hayasi said.

"In this unusual case, we think Sandor Nemeth was picking up signals from his brother on an unconscious level and experiencing his pain.

"This would be the first case of this type ever recorded, but we believe our theory is the only explanation."

Dr Hayasi said both brothers are now back at their homes recovering.

Teen & gal are living a Blue Lagoon fantasy!

A teenage dreamer and his pretty "Girl Friday" have beached themselves on a deserted South Pacific island — to live out their Blue Lagoon fantasy for six months!

Dear Countess Sabak: I am 37-years-old and I've been flat-chested all my life. My bra size right now is only a 32AA, so that ought to give you some idea how small I am.

I met this real nice guy and he says he'd like to marry me, but only if I get my breasts made bigger by plastic surgery. He says he'd like me to go up to at least a 36C size.

I spoke to a plastic surgeon and he says he can make them that big real easy. The operation will be expensive but since my boyfriend is unemployed, he won't help one bit with it.

My boyfriend is good-looking and he has a nice personality, and I'd really like to marry him. But I don't really want to get my breasts made so big. I'm quite honest. I like them the way they are.

What do you think, Countess? Should I go for the surgery and get the most of my dreams, or stay flat and end up an old maid? I also forgot to tell you that I was born Jan. 3, 1962. — Flat Chested in Fresno

Dear Flat Chested: I see no happiness for you with this man. The shapiness I see in your future tell me that he'll make only short and brief appearances, leading to a lifetime of regret.

Stay as you are and I promise you soon after this year is done. The attitude of your future husband are ND

TRAGEDY [redacted] BEAUTY SALON

Housewife dies when hair dryer overheats!

By BEATRICE DEXTER

A housewife getting her hair permed at a beauty salon died tragically when her hair dryer overheated — and baked her brains to a crisp!

Mother of two Eva Ortega of Buenos Aires, Argentina, was pronounced dead at the scene of the mishap at the Hermosa Beauty Salon. Authorities say the hair [redacted] reached temperatures in excess of 250 degrees before salon workers discovered that it was malfunctioning.

"The dryer must have overheated very quickly and she [redacted] for [redacted] and one of the police officers who inspected the death scene.

"Her head got so hot, we had to wait 20 minutes before we could touch it.

"Right now we are trying to find out why the machine went haywire. It's a great thing why her skin wasn't fatally

According to Buenos Aires police, Mrs. Ortega went to her beauty salon to have a permanent. The 36-year-old woman was placed under a high-powered hair dryer by a hairdresser and sat reading a magazine, police said.

Witnesses said at one point they saw the [redacted] coming under the dryer, but thought she was keeping time to the Music. After a half hour, a hairdresser checked the woman and found she was dead.

"It was a horrible sight," said the salon owner, Maria Acuda y Marquez. She was [redacted] when [redacted] was discovered and the plastic curlers had melted.

"If only she had managed to call out to us, we could have [redacted] her [redacted]."

Classic comeback foils crooks

Sonia Sudak was strolling along listening to a classical concerto when two teenage toughs came up and demanded her head-phones radio. But crafty Sonia sent them scurrying — by reassuring them the radio played only classical music!

The women was walking in New York City's Central Park, enjoying a Vivaldi composition, when the youths approached and tried to rip off her radio.

"You wouldn't want it," Sonia told them. "It plays only classical music."

The boys' looks turned to disgust and one of them muttered a four-letter word. Then they turned and scampered away — probably in search of a radio that was a bit more versatile.

ARIES

Mar. 21-Apr. 19

The lunar position promises a period of calm and tranquility for the effervescent Aries. It is a time for contemplation and introspection, dear readers. Use it wisely.

You have a secret that you're dying to tell. Caution is the word, as your indiscretion could haunt you in months to come.

The week begins with your name not exactly behind one of your pet projects. A discussion of your goals will clear the air.

TAURUS

Apr. 20-May 20

Your busy newspaper schedule has you feeling rushed as a time when you could relax and spend more romantic moments with your loved ones.

Make plans for weekend activities early on, especially if reservations will be needed.

Your Taurus determination to have your own way in a career crisis leads to fireworks that could cause permanent damage to relationships with co-workers. Weigh the consequences carefully.

GEMINI

May 21-June 20

The generous Gemini can't resist surprising loved ones with gifts, the more unusual the better. Check your bank balance so you are appropriately close to an overdraft and will have to do a dance to your purse strings for a time.

As the week begins, a quarrel with a close friend erupts over a really trivial matter. By week's end, peace is restored.

The social pace for single Geminis increases this period. Unplanned blooms is unexpected ways.

CANCER

June 21-July 22

Unexplained gloominess, accompanied by a sense of impending doom mars the week's beginning. By week's end your outlook brightens. Leo plays a prominent role.

Center your activities around your home during this period, with emphasis on enjoying the company of family members and your closest friends.

A long-planned-for social engagement is cancelled, leaving you and your mate feeling frustrated. But this unexpected time is good use.

LEO

July 23-Aug. 22

You start the week feeling up in arms and with energy to a few spare. Cancel social engagements for a few days and catch up on much-needed rest.

Expect some frustrations from [illegible] project for a family relative. However, your mate comes to [illegible] and is able to smooth ruffled feathers.

A good time to shop, Leo, especially in those few markets you've been longing to visit. Bargains abound, so get an early start.

VIRGO

Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Wishes can come true! Don't just sit there, take positive steps toward realizing your dreams.

What those around you criticize your actions, remember that persons born under the sign of Virgo often dance to a different beat. You are on the right track, so hang in there.

An unplanned presentation of friends on the weekend introduces you to a romantic partner, one who will dominate your social life for weeks to come.

LIBRA

Sept. 23-Oct. 22

A complaint of some type you discouraged and is interfering with your performance. A full weekday hours dedicated to clearing up this mess is the answer.

Planetary movements favors perfect timing for discussions with co-workers, perhaps with re-assignment of obligations and duties.

A midweek trip takes you closer to old haunts, which affords you the opportunity to look up old friends and reminisce about the good old days. Enjoy!

SCORPIO

Oct. 23-Nov. 21

Your career is under the microscope.

During the next few days, you receive help from someone — probably an Aries — behind the scenes.

However, your crying for the moonlight could get you into trouble with superiors that week.

Don't be tempted to make promises you can't keep.

Variety has been the spice in your love life, but get ready to meet the one you will ask to commit to a lasting relationship.

SAGITTARIUS

Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Outside problems demand the time around you, especially in your work place. Be wary, take vitamins daily and keep regular hours. With care you can avoid illness during the rundown winter months.

You find yourself struggling with daytime responsibilities pressed upon each weekend. Take heart, as improvements will surely take place by week's end.

Travel is in your immediate future. An unusual development could open doors to unexplored ways.

CAPRICORN

Dec. 22-Jan. 19

The weekend finds you feeling frustrated and restless. Too much indoor activity and your sedentary job are the culprits. Exercise is the answer, or take up a new activity.

Learn relaxation techniques and practice them regularly to help you through these recurring moods.

Friends play a significant role in your weekend plans. Avoid long-distance destinations.

Check the papers for a local happening that appeals to all, especially children.

If your birthday is this week . . .

Pitch your hats! Travel highlights the coming year for lucky you. You'll be off on more than one fun-filled holiday that will recharge your batteries.

Don't be surprised when a stranger gives you a little too much attention a little fresh. Put it on a chaste and steer it around your work. It will change your luck.

Business will boom. You'll get a raise and be offered a better position at another firm.

A chunk of money will threaten the life of a loved one. Come up on first aid techniques concerning choking. You may save a life.

AQUARIUS

Jan. 20-Feb. 18

Lucky you! Grandparents agree to be responsible for children so you and your beloved can make and carry out plans for a lovely getaway weekend, or several honeymoons if you like.

Early in the week problems with a loved one will arise. Your quick thinking will help you to calm troubled waters.

Leave a friend of a friend helps your career in an unusual and unexpected way. Watch out for Oriental platters.

PISCES

Feb. 19-Mar. 20

You have been called a dreamer, and, indeed, you are a creative person. However, you do have a tougher side that you manage to keep hidden from view. That toughness will get you through the difficulties you find yourself facing.

A word of warning, there are rainy days ahead. Now is the time to curb your spending and save.

The weekend is promising for single and seeking Pisces. The opportunities to meet eligible partners comes your way.

TOWERING over his mom is 8-foot-4 Fred Kempster known as "The Anxbury Giant" during his carnival reign

Gentle king-sized world's tallest man in POW camp

By NICK DONOVAN

"Gentle Giant" Fred Kempster was a lovable guy who never harmed a flea. But he spent years in a POW camp because World War I broke out while he was touring Germany — as the world's tallest man!

8-foot giant called big security risk!

The German Kaiser had branded the 8-foot-4½ Englishman a "security risk" and packed him off to a prisoner of war camp where he remained for almost the duration of the war

Little is known about that period in Fred's life. But what is recorded is the startling change in his physical appearance that had taken place.

When at long last Fred stepped back on British soil he was drawn, emaciated and weak man. Almost the war in fact, only a shell of the proud man he once had been.

Sadly he spent the last few months of his life touring the towns and fairgrounds — as a sideshow freak!

In happier days, Fred was known in the sleepy Wiltshire village of Avebury as "The Gentle Giant." Loved by children and grown-ups alike he always took time to swap jokes about his height.

An enterprising showman put the gentle giant under contract and took him on a tour of Europe as "The World's Tallest Man."

Fred was an immediate success and was soon on his way to stardom. By the time the war broke out in 1914, the showman was rich, but 28-year-old Fred was in a camp. When Fred finally returned to England he was a sick and dying man. To feed himself, he accepted the humiliating role of a sideshow freak.

Martha later he died in Queen's Park Hospital on April 18, 1918, at the age of 29.

It took a team of grave diggers hours to remove tons of earth to open a grave that measured 10 feet long, three feet wide and five feet deep. Two men were needed to carry his lead-lined coffin.

Fur flies in couple's tragic misunderstanding

A jealous hubby was so enraged when he caught his wife holding hands with another man that he slaughtered all 27 of her prize exotic pets — by stuffing the cuddly creatures, one by one, into a churning garbage disposal!

ANGRY HUBBY FEEDS WIFE'S PRIZE PETS TO GARBAGE DISPOSAL!

Leopold Renner turned his cozy home into a horror chamber, then learned later that his wife's mystery man was really her long lost brother.

"It was just a terrible misunderstanding. But he was so jealous he killed my babies in the most ghastly way imaginable," Leopold's wife Frieda told a court in Vienna, Austria.

"I always knew he was a wild man, but I never realized what a beast he could be."

The nauseating tale began on a joyous note, when Frieda, 44, got a phone call from the brother she hadn't seen in four decades.

"Kurt promised to fly in to see me the very next day for a big reunion," Frieda said.

"I didn't say a word to Leopold because we were going to surprise him. We thought he'd be happy for us."

But the day Kurt arrived from Berlin, the others hubby stopped by a windshop on his way home from work — and saw his wife inside, holding hands with a strange man. Outraged, Leopold rushed to their home, grabbed a rifle and opened fire on Frieda's collection of fine china.

Then he turned his rage toward his wife's most cherished possessions — the little squirrels, doves, frogs hamsters, a cuddly African bush baby and other creatures the children-despite had gathered from around the world.

One by one, he hauled the petrified pets from a laundry room into the kitchen and pushed them, still alive, into the deadly jaws of the garbage disposal. Then he carriage in the kitchen complete. Leopold plopped down in his favorite easy chair.

"We came home laughing and chatting — and walked into a slaughterhouse," Frieda said. "Very smugly, Leopold told us all the gory details. I screamed and ran outside and threw up on the lawn."

Leopold was convicted of cruelty to animals and sentenced to six months in jail. His wife has filed for divorce.

But during his trial, the hot-tempered hubby showed little remorse.

"It's Frieda's fault," he told the judge. "If she'd told me what was going on, this wouldn't have happened."

"But it's not the end of the world. They were only animals."

— JOE BERGER

CUDDLY little African bush baby didn't stand a chance.

THIS face of panic is now in vivid pieces.

TAME frog was stuffed into the whirling blades.

RARE white squirrel was killed on cold blood by hot-tempered Leopold.

Irregular heartbeat is a healthy sign

If you're scared half to death because you have an irregular or "chaotic" heartbeat, you can stop fretting — it's actually the sign of a healthy ticker!

That's what Harvard Medical School researcher Ary Goldberger told the American Association for the Advancement of Science at a recent meeting in San Francisco.

He explained that a normal heartbeat fluctuates over any given time period, but stabilizes into a wavelike, consistent beat just before the onset of sudden heart failure.

Approximately 440,000 people keel over dead each year in North America from sudden heart failure.

Porno star falls & flattens her 50-inch bust!

Sexy porno star Sara Lucas was filming her latest blue movie when she took a tragic tumble — and smashed her 50-inch silicone breasts as flat as pancakes!

Sultry Sara, 29, was stuffed inside a heavy suit of armor for a scene from The Trojan Women when a co-star's horse knocked her on her backside.

"My breasts were my bread and butter," she told reporters in Lisbon.

"Now I've got to have them built all over again. And because of all the publicity everyone is going to know they're not real. The dent more of my career will ever recover."

Sara suffered her bosom-busting tumble just minutes after climbing into the suit of clanging armor.

"I could barely stand up in that thing to begin with, and then the weight just knocked me off balance," she said.

"I fell backwards and I could feel my breastplate and I could feel my implants explode. I thought I was going to die."

The once-shapely lady is seeking more than $1 million in damages from the movie's producers and porno actor Antonio Fuerta, whose steed sent her crashing to the ground.

"I begged them to use a stand-in in that armor, but they said they couldn't afford one," Sara told reporters.

"They also could have used fake armor instead of making me wear the real thing. Everything else in that movie was

Jealous lover kills 'The Good Fairy'

A wealthy homosexual known as "The Good Fairy" for granting the dying wishes of AIDS victims was brutally murdered by his longtime lover, who resented him lavishing money and attention on other men.

By ALAN PETERS

According to French authorities, Christian Carre, 48, died in his country home on the outskirts of Paris when his gay lover, Paul Mayer, plunged an antique samurai sword through his chest again and again.

"The two men had a bitter argument," said Police Inspector Roland Laurent. "Mayer grabbed a sword from the victim's collection of antique weapons and killed him."

According to Inspector Laurent, flamboyant art dealer Christian Carre was known within the gay community of Paris as "The Good Fairy" because he visited terminal AIDS patients and granted them one final wish.

"In most cases the dying wishes were simple ones having to do with funeral arrangements or taking care of outstanding debts," the inspector said.

"But some of the requests were very extravagant," Inspector Laurent said. "One man wanted to see the Great Wall before he died, so Carre flew him and his nurse to China at great expense."

In granting other wishes Carre arranged for patients to meet their favorite celebrity, give financial help and throw lavish parties for them.

Carre's lover became jealous of the time and money being spent on these other men, said police. On the day of the slaying, Mayer, 28, told Carre that if he granted one more wish, they were through.

"Later that evening Carre received a call from an AIDS patient who wanted to see him," said Inspector Laurent. "Carre couldn't refuse and was preparing to go to the hospital when Mayer killed him."

Groom falls & breaks his back — carrying his blubbery bride

New hubby Sergio Sensini fell and broke his back while carrying his 300-pound bride over the threshold — but their wedding night wasn't a total disaster.

By HENRY WEBER

Gini Sensini fractured her right arm and leg in the fall and was hospitalized with him!

"At least we're in this together," Sensini, 24, told reporters from the couple's hospital room in Arizona, Italy. "It might be weeks or even months before we can do the things that newlyweds usually do.

"But at least we're alive. The doctors say that one or both of us might have been killed in our fall."

The bizarre drama unfolded a few hours after the Sensinis were married in Arizona. After their reception, the couple drove to a luxury hotel to spend their wedding night.

But when Sensini hoisted his 5-foot-eight bride to step over the threshold, he lost his footing — and they crashed to the floor.

"It hurt so bad I thought I was going to cry," said 5-foot-4 Sensini, who, at 190 pounds, is actually 110 pounds lighter than his wife.

"Gini was on top of me screaming in pain and we couldn't move because we were jammed in the doorway. We yelled for help and a bellboy finally found us.

"But he was not strong enough to help. The hotel manager had to call the fire department to get enough men to get us up."

Sensini fractured three vertebrae in the top and is expected to be hospitalized for at least six weeks.

Mrs. Sensini suffered compound fractures of her arm and leg and will probably remain in the hospital for about one or two weeks longer.

"I told Sergio he didn't have to carry me over the threshold but he wouldn't listen," said Mrs. Sensini.

"I guess we'll look back on this in our old age and laugh about it.

"But for right now I wouldn't feel worse," said the bride.

"It's almost like we're still waiting to get married."

Govt. wants its share

TAX MAN

By SUSAN JIMISON

A frustrated tax man swears he'll follow dead psychic Doris Stokes to the hereafter — so he can get his hands on the fortune she stashed away before her death in 1987.

The London revenue agent in charge of Doris' taxes hasn't the ghost of an idea where the famous English medium put her money. He's tried everything — even sitting in on seances to ask the silver-haired seer where she hid the cash. But Doris is silent as the grave.

"We've reached her on the other side but it doesn't help," said a friend of Doris' family who joined in a government ordered 4-hour seance with the psychic's husband John, 68, adopted son Terry, 48, and the tax man.

"She'll chatter on about anything except what she did with all her money. When we ask about that she fades away."

Doris made headlines as a top psychic for years before her tragic death from cancer at the age of 67 — and she made a fortune as well. She was featured in The NEWS and other newspapers, wrote a book and attracted huge audiences at seances and lectures.

Using her special psychic powers for a fee, Doris transmitted countless messages to the living from dead souls in the hereafter.

She raked up to $4,000 for each public appearance and amassed millions of devotees around the world, yet she left

Healthy boy born in an abortion clinic!

By JACK ALEXANDER

A young mother delivered a healthy, 8-pound, 3-ounce baby boy — up the hose of an abortion clinic.

"We were surprised as all get out, but certainly tickled to death," said Lou Brown, director of the clinic in Jackson, Miss.

Mrs. Brown and nurse Tom Tolar were in the clinic lobby when a young woman walked in and leaned her head on the front desk.

"Before we could find out what was wrong, she began screaming and slumped over," said Mrs. Brown. "Then we realized she was in deep labor."

An employee called paramedics but before they arrived, the young woman in her 20s gave birth to the baby with the help of the two women.

By the time paramedics arrived, Mrs. Brown, who is also a nurse, had cut the umbilical cord. "I just handed the little guy to the paramedics," she said.

The mother and baby were taken to University Medical Center. "We talked later and were told both were doing very well," said Mrs. Brown.

"We made a lot of jokes from anti-abortionists about killing babies," said Mrs. Brown. "Maybe now they'll see that we're not the murderers they think we are."

Hospital officials would not identify the mother or her baby.

Ulcers are contagious, docs think

If you're married to someone who has ulcers, watch out! It appears the stomach ailment may be contagious.

Researchers have found that bacteria commonly associated with ulcers — c. pylori — are present in much higher numbers in people whose spouses have ulcers than in the general population.

The bacteria was found in 80 percent of 34 spouses of infected ulcer patients, but in only 26 percent of 15 spouses of the non-infected control group.

The findings are leading experts to believe you can catch ulcers from someone with whom you are intimate.

...of a fortune medium hid so they contact her in a seance!

ASKS DEAD PSYCHIC: WHERE DID YOU STASH THE CASH?

. . . but she refused to tell!

...only $10,000 and a mountain of debts when she died, Doris' pals say they'd like to help tax authorities but they haven't been able to find the psychic's money either. They've been hunting for it since Doris passed on, with no success.

So far the psychic's spirit has played dead whenever loved ones beg for help. Doris told them through a medium, "There is money, but don't try to find it — it will only cause you trouble."

Now the tax man is pulling his hair out over Doris' stubbornness and he's more determined than ever to get the goods on the psychic. He's asked for Doris' private financial papers and will subpoena former accountants have been hired to get her business files in order. And if a search of the medium's papers doesn't reveal what happened to the missing money, the 59-year-old undisputed tax exec vows he'll find some other way to break the dead psychic's silence.

"After the last seance the tax man told me the Stokes case was making an old man of him and it wouldn't be too long before he passed on himself," the Stokes' family friend recalled. "He was almost in tears, he was so frustrated.

"He said, 'When I get to the other side, I'm going to find Doris Stokes first thing. I'm going to find out where she put her cash and send a message back to the living. The government is going to get its money — even if I have to go all the way to Hell to find it!' "

P.S.A.F.I. T and friends say they've contacted the spirit of dead psychic Doris Stokes during seances but so far she has been unwilling to talk about what she did with her cash before she died.

Welfare money buys rag-picker $2 million lottery ticket

A poverty-stricken couple with five hungry kids spend half of a paltry $1.30 welfare handout on a lottery ticket — and won a $2 million jackpot!

An Argentine news report identified the rags-to-riches couple as Gonzalo and Rosina Olave, who lived with their children in a one-room tin and cardboard shanty in the ghetto district outside Buenos Aires.

"But that was before we handed him the first of the $178,000 checks he will receive each year for the next 20 years," lottery spokesman Carlos Mendoza said.

"Now the family lives in a very nice house in the suburbs and Olave has bought himself a Volkswagen.

"It's truly an amazing story. They bought the lottery ticket for a mere 85 cents and became millionaires. They will live in comfort for the rest of their lives."

Contacted in his home on the beautiful countryside far from the ghetto he had known all his life, Olave said he is still in a state of shock over his good fortune.

"I still can't believe it's true that it has really happened to me," he told reporters still marvel and astounded. "The day I bought the ticket, Rosina and I had gone to our parish church and the priest gave me 10 australs (about $1.30) to buy food.

"Lottery tickets were being sold in the store we went to. Rosina grabbed me by the arm and told me to buy one. She said, 'I have a feeling inside me that says we should do it.' So I did.

"The numbers I chose were the last numbers in our ages — my five children, Rosina and me. They were 4, 5, 7, 8, 2, 1. Three weeks later, I learned that was the winning combination. I was overcome with gratitude. Then the cried all night."

Olave gave God his thanks in a different way. He's pledged half of his winnings to the humble ghetto church that gave him the money . . . and the opportunity for his family to leave their life of poverty forever.

5-year-old's 'toy' was loaded pistol

A kindergarten teacher was in shock after learning that the handgun he took from one of his 5-year-old students wasn't a toy — but a fully loaded .25-caliber automatic.

Teacher Donald Miller, 43, of the South Bronx, N.Y., echoes said the incident began when another child came to weren't allowed so Miller went up to the boy and was stunned to see that the "toy" gun was real. Fortunately, the boy just handed it over.

"Either luck or good fortune was on my side," Miller said. "I'm just saying a prayer of thanks when I think of what could have happened.
